

SUDANESE CHRISTIANS GIVEN UNTIL APRIL 8 TO LEAVE NORTH

By Ryan Mauro WorldThreats.com March 28, 2012

The Sudanese regime is on its way to becoming the next Iran, regardless of whether President Omar Bashir remains in power or not. The country is moving towards becoming a full-blown Sharia state, comparable to Iran, Saudi Arabia or Afghanistan under the Taliban. Towards that end, up to 700,000 Christians have been told to pack up and leave by April 8 or they'll be treated as foreigners.

PRESIDENT OMAR BASHIR

The Bashir regime has always been an enemy of the U.S. and those who value human rights but it is now doing everything it can to please its Islamist opposition. The regime knew it would raise the ire of the Islamists when it allowed the mostly-Christian region of South Sudan to become an independent country. In the hopes of staving off a rebellion, Bashir promised to remodel his country based on Sharia Law with Arabic as the only official language. He also promised not to seek another term in 2015.

Bashir's most powerful opponent is a cleric named Hasan al-Turabi, the leader of the Sudanese branch of the Muslim Brotherhood. It is hard to overstate his impact on the growth of Islamic extremism and terrorism. He has been called "Sudan's Osama" and "The Pope of Terrorism." After helping Bashir come to power, Turabi used his base in Sudan to build close relationships with every virtually single Islamic terrorist group and government.

After South Sudan seceded, the Islamists demanded that Bashir made good on his word. They formed the Islamic Constitution Front and drafted a Sharia-based constitution. The imam of Khartoum's Grand Mosque endorsed it and said Bashir must "either rule by Islam or go." Other members of the group explicitly said they'd revolt if their wishes aren't granted.

The Sudanese Christians are facing increasing persecution.
